By 5:30 on Friday night the Ultramar station on Highway 35 had run out of regular and premium gas after streams of cars poured into the county from neighbouring areas to fill up. Luckily, 55,000 litres were delivered later that night keeping Dean Grozelle busy at the pumps.

Blackout fuels buying spree

Long lines snake towards local gas stations... and beer store

by ERIN TENNANT
Times staff

Minden gas stations enjoyed booming pump sales on Friday as commuters scrambling for fuel swooped on the handful of gas bars in Haliburton County where electricity was still running.

As Ontario suffered its worst blackout since 1965, the Highlands was - mysteriously - an island of resiliency, with the region's power grid showing no signs of foundering.

As gas stations throughout the province were forced to shut down services for lack of electricity to pump fuel, drivers from surrounding counties made a dash for Minden and Haliburton, hoping to collect fuel to survive an outage which - at least until just after midday on Friday - gave little indication of ending soon.

The queues were unprecedented at Minden's two major gas stations on Highway 35, with lines of 40 cars or more crowding the garage tarmac and flowing out onto the outside lane of the two-lane highway.

It took half an hour after the province-wide outage struck - at about 4:30 pm on Thursday afternoon - before sedans and SUVs began pouring in for gasoline at 72.9 cents/L for Regular, and station attendants began bustling to meet the relentless demand. Many drivers, either collecting supplies for stranded friends or just preparing for the worst-case scenario, packed jerry cans for stock up on extra fuel. At times, tempers would flare in the 29° heat as drivers jostling

Minden Legion gets $25,200 Trillium grant

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Minden Legion Branch 636 President Georgina Parkes said she was extremely pleased that the Legion was the recipient of an Ontario Trillium grant of $25,200. The money will be used to upgrade the building to meet the fire code.

"Neville Whiteside, an active member and volunteer worked very closely with the fire marshal and the contractor to determine what renovations were necessary and this data was an integral part of the Trillium grant application," Parkes said. "Neville will continue to work with the Legion Building Committee to ensure that the proposed renovations meet the fire code regulations."

Parkes noted that a lot of preparatory work is necessary before the renovations can get started. That work will be done mainly by Legion volunteers.

"The Ontario Trillium Foundation is to be commended for its support of all non-profit and service organizations in the small communities across our province," Parkes said. "This financial support ensures that these organizations will be able to continue to contribute to and support their communities. A very big thank you."

Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Chris Hodgson presented the cheque to Parkes.

"It is my pleasure to present this cheque to the Minden Legion," Hodgson said. "The renovations and improvements will ensure the safety of members, volunteers and staff."

The improvements will be done over the course of the next 12 months. Last year, the branch received $15,700 from the Ontario Trillium Foundation, which was used to pave the parking lot and make the building more accessible.

The Minden Legion Branch provides support to veterans and their families and operates a wide variety of senior, youth and community programs.

From Baghdad to Minden

Toronto Star reporter Mitch Potter shares stories from the Mid East at Rotary Club dinner

by ANDY LLOYD
Times staff

The Wagon Wheel restaurant on Highway 35 south of Minden is a long way from Baghdad. In its pine paneled dining room, horseshoes and Indian corn decorate the walls, converted gas lanterns hang from the ceiling and a woodstove sits waiting for winter months. It's about as Canadian as you get. But last Monday night the Minden Rotary Club was transported to Iraq in that very dining room as the Toronto Star's Middle-East bureau chief, Mitch Potter, shared his experiences with the club.

Potter, a veteran reporter, is visiting family in the Minden area before he and his wife, former Times reporter Anne Hewitt, return to Israel in two weeks. Last Monday he spoke publicly for the first time about his experiences as a reporter during the Iraq war, and about what it's like to live in Israel right now.

About 50 people attended the meeting. Potter spoke after dinner, first discussing life in Jerusalem. He said that under the constant threat of suicide bombings, he and his wife stay indoors whenever possible. They don't go to restaurants or other public spaces and they avoid groups of more than four people. But Potter says that in Jerusalem, you get used to living indoors and avoiding crowds; it's the norm.

He warned that the chaos we see on television is often overblown. Potter compared television coverage of Israel to CNN's coverage of SARS in Toronto that showed everyone wearing masks.

Nevertheless, the situation is grave. "It gives you chills living in this city," Potter said of Jerusalem. "We can hear explosions of suicide bombers from our home."

When war with Iraq seemed inevitable, Potter went to Baghdad. He told the Rotary Club about his secret weapon for moving around the Middle-East. Potter has two Canadian passports, something he went to great lengths to get. One is for travel between Israel and the occupied territories and the other is for travel to Arab countries.

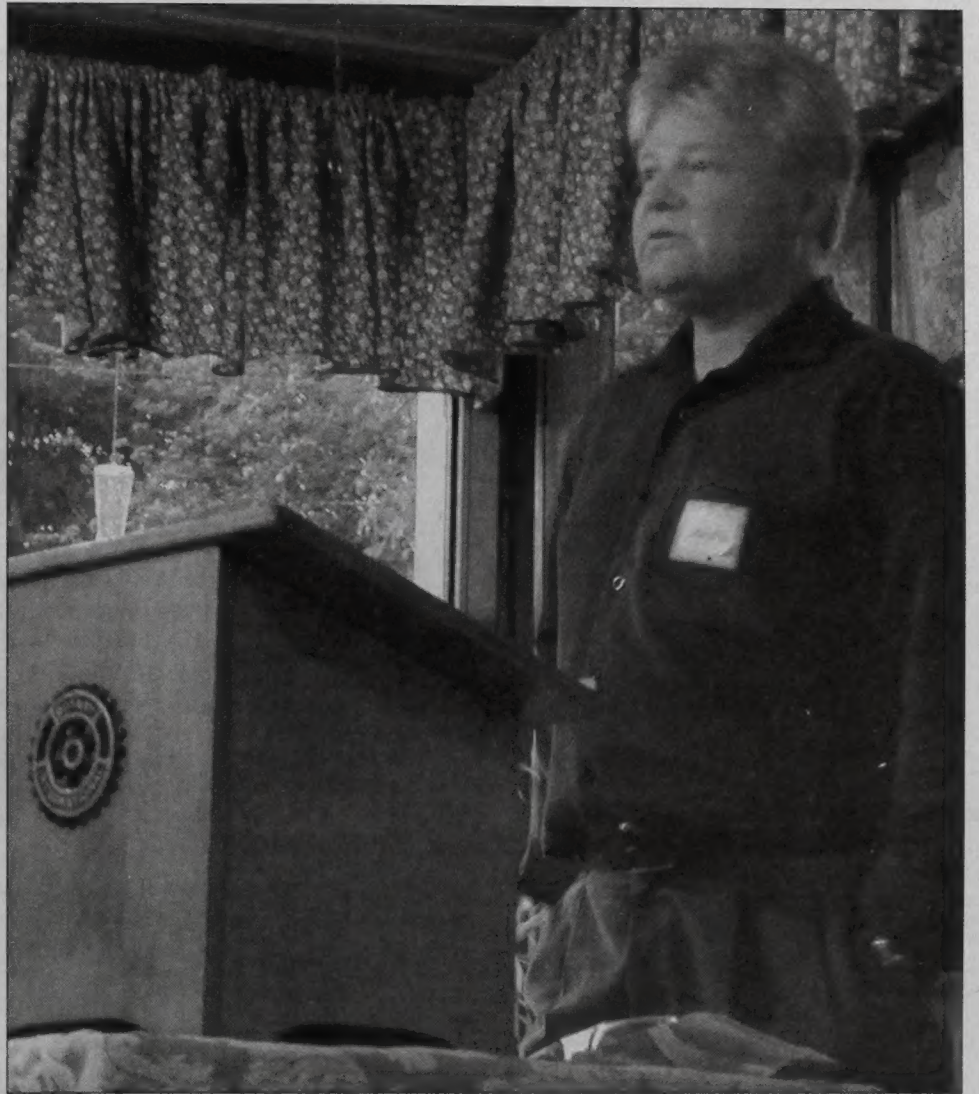

"If you have an Israel stamp in your passport you're not going to the Arab world. It's that simple," Potter explained.

Apart from his trusty second passport there was one other thing Potter said journalists in Iraq needed: cash, and lots of it. He carried up to $20,000 U.S. in cash, strapped to his body in various money belts and wallets.

Saddam Hussein's regime charged journalists daily fees for permission to be in Iraq. Fees started at $50 a day and reached $150 a day before the fall of Baghdad. On top of those fees Potter said journalists were charged $200 a day to use satellite phones, the only secure way to communicate with the outside world.

When war was imminent most of the 1,200 foreign journalists in Baghdad were evacuated. Potter said there were rumours that Hussein would use weapons of mass destruction on his own people in Baghdad and as a result most media organizations pulled out. The Star's publisher, John Honderich, sent Potter to the Syrian border to wait out the war.

"I think there was a very good chance

Mitch Potter and his wife Anne Hewitt, whose family is from the area, will be returning to Jerusalem in a few weeks.

Saddam passed right in front of my nose," Potter said. Some observers think Hussein fled to Syria during the early days of the war.

On the Syrian border Potter said the Iraqis and Syrians he met were incredibly hospitable. "They pointed at me and said, 'Chretien'," he recalled, surprised by their reaction.

Potter said they were acutely aware of international developments, despite strict government controls over the media. He said some people in Baghdad had illegal satellites that could pick up CNN and Al Jazeera but they risked six months in jail if caught.

Now, after the war, it's anyone's guess as to what the future holds. But Potter says even though Saddam is gone, the people don't see themselves as free.

"Freedom means something very different for them. They see freedom as freedom from outside invaders. They've been occupied by the Ottomans, the British and now the Americans," Potter said.

He's seen a lot over the past six months but Potter encourages the public to stay tuned. "I think the biggest story of the war is still to come. How will history see this? Did we do the right thing?"

After his speech Potter fielded questions on topics ranging from the war, to Israel, and to trends in journalism today.

He brought along a bulletproof flack jacket and a helmet to show the crowd what journalists have to wear in extreme situations. Minden Hills Reeve Ross Rigney volunteered to try it on while someone jokingly suggested it would come in handy at council meetings.

Potter and his wife, Anne Hewitt, also a journalist, will return to Jerusalem in two weeks. The couple expects to spend several more years in the Middle East.

911 process hits a few bumps along the road

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

The 911 system continues to cause problems as municipalities grapple with the hiccups that come along with putting the complex system in place by the June 2004 deadline.

The county's 911 staff are in the process of putting up signs for the individual houses and the new road name signs. In Minden Hills, Councillor Peter Oyler says people are already using their new 911 addresses but those addresses will not be valid or recognized by anyone until next June. This is why the old road signs are still being left up until the new system is officially operational.

Councillor Ingram Wessel says he is getting complaints about the numbers for houses not being sequential and that is causing confusion.

Councillor Bill Obee, who sits on the 911 committee, explained that the system is based on the number 1000 plus the geographic positioning data of the home from the end of the road, plus two or three depending on which side of the road the home is on. Councillors called the system "ludicrous" but it is consistently employed across Ontario.

The committee of the whole for Minden Hills will be sending a by-law to officially name all the roads to regular council later in August.

Over in Highlands East, Councillor Suzanne Partridge says she is getting "countless phone calls" about the new road signs but has been unable to get a hold of 911 co-ordinator Stephen Foster in order to get answers for people. The biggest confusion, she says, is caused by the placement of the road name signs. The new signs are being placed on the opposite side of the road as the sign; they are hard to see and people are confused about what road the new signs are actually for. Deputy-clerk Glen Madill says the office is also getting a large number of calls about the signs.

"I'm appalled after all the work we've done on this (911) project. It is so confusing and the signs are covered by trees," says Partridge.

Deputy-reeve Chuck Viner says the company that was hired to put up the signs was $150,000 cheaper than a local company and the savings had to be taken into consideration in hiring them.

In Dysart et al, Councillor Jerry Walker warned council that within a couple of weeks the 911 committee will be advertising in the newspapers the new final road names for Dysart. He expects a flood of calls from people unhappy with the names chosen.

Councillor Leon Jones suggested that they draw the line now and not allow any further name changes. Reeve Murray Fearrey said Algonquin Highlands has recently changed four road names and Highlands East changed 10 so he did not think, as Walker suggested, they would be inundated with requests to change names.

However, Fearrey also suggested that any requests for new names must be made in writing and agreed to by at least 75 per cent of the home owners on the road.

Walker and council agreed they would not consider verbal requests.

Grocery store goes flat out as shoppers search for food

for a pump hose lost their nerve after half-hour waits.

But the garages were mostly up to the task. Ultramar was able to keep its Regular and Supreme gas bars open until 5:30pm the on Friday, serving 36,000 litres of Regular since it opened at 6am.

"The rush started about 5pm on Thursday," said Ultramar attendant, Dean Grozelle. "Then all of a sudden we got swamped."

On Friday night 40,000 litres of Regular and 15,000 of Supreme arrived by truck, allowing Ultramar to reopen on Saturday morning.

Cango meanwhile pumped out 45,000 of its 60,000 litres of Regular on Friday, before a fresh truckload of fuel arrived at 6:30pm.

Ben Jowitt, staying with friends in Minden, brought five empty cans to Cango. They held 100 litres of what he described as "standby" fuel for three family vehicles.

For others travelling from outside the county, the scramble for supplies proved to be premature. Nevin MacGregor, from Bracebridge, reached Ultramar with three friends at around 12:30 p.m., minutes before power was restored at his hometown. "We siphoned gas from four cars back in Bracebridge just so we could get here [in MacGregor's jeep]," he said.

But gas wasn't the only item in high demand in Minden. MacGregor, because the blackout had spoiled a lot of refrigerated foods in Muskoka, also bought two bags of ice, spent $60 on groceries and purchased two cases of beer "because we heard the beer store in Minden was one of only three still open in the province."

At IGA Minden, six tills were running flat out on Friday night as shoppers rushed from areas south of Minden to the first IGA store north of Toronto with refrigeration still online. Store manager Jamie Dollo spent much of Friday morning fielding phone calls from shoppers, living as far south as Etobicoke, who wanted to know if his store was open for business.

But because deliveries from Toronto had been delayed since the power outage, the hordes that arrived by Friday afternoon soon cleaned out the chain store of its already low stocks of fresh produce as well as snapped up the bread delivery that did arrive at 4 p.m.

"We've been pretty well wiped out of fruit and vegetables," said Dollo on Friday. He added that more produce was due that night, while the next bread delivery wasn't due until Sunday.

At Minden's Beer Store, a queue more befitting a holiday long weekend could be seen lining up outside the front door.

Generators too were in hot demand following the blackout. Residents from nearby areas sought generators in Minden because shops in other centres, such as in Lindsay, were no longer able to make electronic cash transactions.

A woman rushes with her two jerry cans after the emergency purchase at Minden's Home Hardware.

Drivers from across the region lined up at local gas stations to fill up, although the gas stations ran out of gas before night fell, their own tanks were filled before Saturday's crowds arrived.

"I went out and rented a generator on Thursday afternoon so the meat in my freezers wouldn't go bad," said the owner of Angiers View Farm, near Noland, who said his freezers held 80 whole chickens. "I've been trying to buy a generator here in Minden but everywhere has already sold out."

Power to most areas in the province was restored by Saturday morning. Hydro One warned people to be prepared for rotating blackouts on Friday afternoon as a way of preserving energy, but Minden wasn't affected. Only brief outages were reported here.

NOTICE

Residence and cottage owners on the section of the Gull River between the base of the rapids at Horseshoe Lake and the Orillia Power Generation Corporation's power dam on the section known as "Minden Lake" - please be advised that during a period of time from July 14, 2003 to mid September the Orillia Power Corporation will complete the second phase of the dam rehabilitation project at our generating station located on the Gull River at Concession 3, Lot 3 of Minden Township.

This work by Orillia Power is a proactive step to ensure that long-term structural integrity and the safety of the dam structure is maintained.

The portion of the project that requires lowering the water level by 2 feet will begin in early August, 2003 and will extend through mid September, 2003. The work will involve anchoring the dam to the underlying bedrock and the removal and replacement of approximately one foot of deteriorated concrete on the crest of the dam. It will be necessary to lower the water level in this reach of the river by two feet in elevation for the duration of the project. We appreciate your understanding in our commitment to maintain our high level of public safety at our station.

Should you have any questions or concerns regarding this project, please contact David Hawkins at 1-705-326-2495 extension 255 or write to: Orillia Power Generation Corporation, P.O. Box 398 Orillia Ontario, L3V 6J9

Blackout brings out best and worst in city drivers

by MARTHA PERKINS
Times staff

Former Minden Times reporter Allison Taylor has learned a lot about human behaviour during her daily commute from Mississauga – and it hasn't always been pretty.

Her experiences during last Thursday's unprecedented blackout taught her that while there are some drivers who are inconsiderate, incredibly rude and prone to anger, the rest of humanity can make up for it.

Taylor works at a magazine called IT World Canada and her office is near the Scarborough Town Centre. When everything literally and figuratively shut down on Thursday, she got in her car and headed for home.

"It took me 45 minutes to get through one intersection in Scarborough," she said from the powerless comfort of her home the next day. "The lights were out and the drivers wouldn't stop. They drove right through. It was nuts."

The drive through Mississauga could have been as bad were it not for some angels of the roadway – people who volunteered their time to stand in the middle of the intersection to direct traffic.

It took former Times reporter Allison Taylor an extra hour to get home on Thursday.

The one-and-a-half hour commute took her two-and-a-half hours.

Once at home, her neighbourhood turned into a street party. When dusk fell and there was nothing to do inside, they all gathered on the street and marvelled at the beautiful night sky.

The next morning, Taylor, in her dedicated fashion, was ready to hop in her car and go to work but when she phoned her boss at 7:30, she was told to go back to bed. It took her till mid-afternoon to get over the sense that she should be at work.

Twenty-four hours after the power went out, her neighbourhood was still without electricity.

"Not even a flicker," she said.

Why Minden kept its power

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

It seems it was good fortune that kept Haliburton County and parts of the City of Kawartha Lakes from losing power along with a huge portion of Ontario and the north-eastern United States.

A retired Hydro employee speculated that our supply may not have been connected to the grid at the time the power was lost.

More accurately, he said that somebody did the right thing at the right time, which isolated this area from the main grid in time to prevent our supply from going down with the rest of the system.

Haliburton County's power comes from various sources at different times as the demand for power fluctuates. One of the power generating plants is Des Joachims, a hydroelectric generating plant on the Ottawa River.

Speculation is that it could have been the system from which we were drawing our power at the time of the power failure and the protective breaker isolated it from the grid.

Noise charges will soon be laid

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

The following are brief reports from the meeting of the Minden Hills committee of the whole on August 14. All recommendations need to be ratified by the council before adoption.

A section of Minden Hills' noise bylaw is still being reviewed in the courts but Councillor Ron Buchanan says there is enough evidence collected by the Ontario Provincial Police to lay a noise violation charge. An on-going problem with a property on the Gull River is one of main catalysts for the bylaw and those owners are now going to be charged.

Councillor Peter Oyler says the neighbouring residents have been complaining for the last 15 months about excessive noise and he wants them to know that council and the OPP are acting on those complaints.

Councillor Ingram Wessell asked how the municipality is going to determine what constitutes a breach of the noise bylaw. Buchanan says any unnecessary noise that disturbs people, such as loud parties at 3 a.m., would be a good example of an infraction. He says is very disturbing to hear that some people might try to use the bylaw in a vindictive way to get at neighbours and those cases will not be pursued.

"Our guys (the OPP) are only dealing with 100 per cent cases," says Buchanan.

Clean and clear

Ten clean and clear bylaw infraction cases were open in the month of July, including two in which the property owners are in the process of cleaning up. One case is in court and an additional two cases have been closed.

Councillors expressed the most concern about a house on Orde Street that is not currently being occupied. Councillor Oyler says the situation has not been resolved satisfactorily and he wants to see staff proceed with looking into whether a demolition order is warranted because it looks to him like it is going to come down on its own. Buchanan agreed and said the building is more than an eyesore; it is dangerous.

Doug Schell, fire chief and bylaw enforcement officer, says they have been in discussion with the property owners who keep promising to do something with the house but nothing has happened.

He added that they are waiting to see the results of a current case being prosecuted for non-compliance with the clean and clear bylaw. Oyler told Schell he did not believe that particular case was precedent setting and they should move ahead.

Bat Lake

The committee has agreed to make a word change on the Bat Lake Ratepayers Association's application to the provincial and federal government to ban on motorboats on the lake. The council had originally said it was not in opposition to the application but on Thursday councillors agreed to say they were in favour of a resolution in favour of the ban.

Councillor Peter Oyler said he did not think the government would further process the application because the association would not likely prove motorboats are a safety hazard but he added that he did not oppose the application.

Speed Limits

The committee will not be recommending a reduction of the speed limit on Twelve Mile Lake Road as per a request from residents. Councillor Bill Obee said the municipality does not have the authority to post any road, other than those in a park, at anything less than 40 kms/hour.

Water regulations

Community halls in Gelert and Lochlin will be affected by new water regulations. The two halls have water supplied by local wells, now considered a ground water supply that must be treated for public consumption.

Robert Romberg, environmental and property operations manager, says he understands that if the buildings are using water, even if it is just for a washroom and not meant for drinking, it still has to be treated.

There is already an ultra violet light disinfection system in the Lochlin Hall but Romberg says the new provincial regulations do not consider the community group's weekly water tests as good enough. He suggested that the Ontario Clean Water Association be contacted for a price on testing.

In Gelert, Romberg said, an engineered water system needs to be approved and then installed by December 31, 2006. Romberg says the OCWA staff will have to review costs for a potential system in the hall.

Village Chalet has new owners

Janice and Craig Faulkner have taken over from Glenda and John Cowling, who owned the popular downtown Minden restaurant for 12 years. The business remains in the family, however – Craig is Glenda's son. The Faulkners, who have two children – Megan and Colby – vow to keep the same great quality and service as the restaurant's patrons have become accustomed to. The Village Chalet offers all day breakfast, daily lunch and dinner specials and home baked treats such as muffins, cookies, tarts and pies. The restaurant is open seven days a week.

Doug and Linda Chant, the previous owners of Wedgewood Marina, at left, were the guests of honour at a recent Customers Appreciation Day. Wedgewood is a strong business in the area as Minden Hills Reeve Ross Rigney was quick to point out. Mark Coles represented the Chamber of Commerce. The new owners, Colleen and Robert Vassos, at right, intend to keep Wedgewood Marina as a full year round operation serving snowmobilers in the winter and ATVs in the shoulder seasons and of course boaters all summer long. The marina offers everything from gas to a snack bar. The legendary Kim Thompson is still the General Manager.

Lodge gets a facelift under new owners

Heather Lodge, on Hwy. 35 between Minden and Carnarvon, has new owners. The lodge officially changed hands June 25. It is open to the public and offers casual fine dining, with boat access. The lodge is couples oriented with a cosy European environment, and will be open year round.

Happy Daze is five years old

Happy Daze Automotive owners John Graham and his wife Gloria are celebrating their fifth year in business at the location on the west side of Highway 35 just north of Minden's South Water Street. Before opening the automotive repair shop, they ran the rental business in the old IGA building on Main Street for four years. Before coming to Minden, John worked for 18 years at an exotic car dealership, working on Ferraris and the like. Cottageing in the area for 21 years helped develop a love of the community and its people. Happy Daze employs four people, who fix all makes and models of cars and trucks. They do brake jobs, air conditioner and radiator repairs and sell and install tires, among other things. The customer base is about 40 per cent retirees, 35 per cent contractors and 25 per cent tourists.

History once again whispers its stories to local writer

by ERIN TENNANT
Times staff

From an early age, John Hulbig absorbed the stories that surrounded him. Riding on horse-drawn cart through Kinmount beside his father, the town clerk, the seven-year-old Hulbig acquired an intimate knowledge of Lutterworth township in the 1930s.

"My father had to tour around town, stopping to meet people, and I'd go along for the ride," recounts Hulbig, now 72. "That's how I got interested in older folks."

From his mother, too, he would learn about the grandparents he never knew, pioneers from Germany and England who settled along the Gull River and went trapping with local natives. "My mother would tell me their stories and draw me pictures as she went," he explains.

So Hulbig would sit and listen. He would listen to stories about the struggles and accomplishments of daily life: the joys of a successful trapping expedition, the hardships of railroad workers during the Depression years, the hardy self-reliance of farm-based families - all of these stories were caught in Hulbig's net, a bank of collective memories for a pioneer community building its identity.

Hulbig has just set down another installment of these early stories in his third book, Whispering Pines - Three: A Haliburton Heritage Continued.

The self-published, 222-page book follows his first collection on Lutterworth's history (1993) and a second publication of poems (2000). The latter helped Hulbig win in 2000 the Ontario Historical Society's Carnochan Award "in recognition of an individual who had contributed many years of service to the heritage community."

The new book, edited by Hulbig's next-door neighbour, Milly Struik, contains 12 chapters - each interleaved by a poem - which focus on the pioneering days of Lutterworth township that Hulbig was so familiar with over 60 years ago.

"I've lived here all my life and I always enjoy writing down the little stories about pioneers and how they got along," says Hulbig. "If it's not written down, people won't know."

Hulbig understands how the area has changed over the years better than most - not just the kind of economic shifts that change the structure and demographic of a community, but the minutiae that invest those details with meaning. And Hulbig is not short of examples.

"When I was young, all our food was prepared at home. If mum wanted a loaf of baker's bread, as a change to the bread she baked at home, she would have to order it in from the storekeeper. It would come in by train and then by stage-coach. It was a little stale by the time we got it... Anyway, I preferred mum's homemade bread."

While there is not much on the pioneering life on the eastern side of the county, Hulbig says the lifestyle was not much different in Dysart at the time than it was in Lutterworth. And besides, he could always rectify any imbalances.

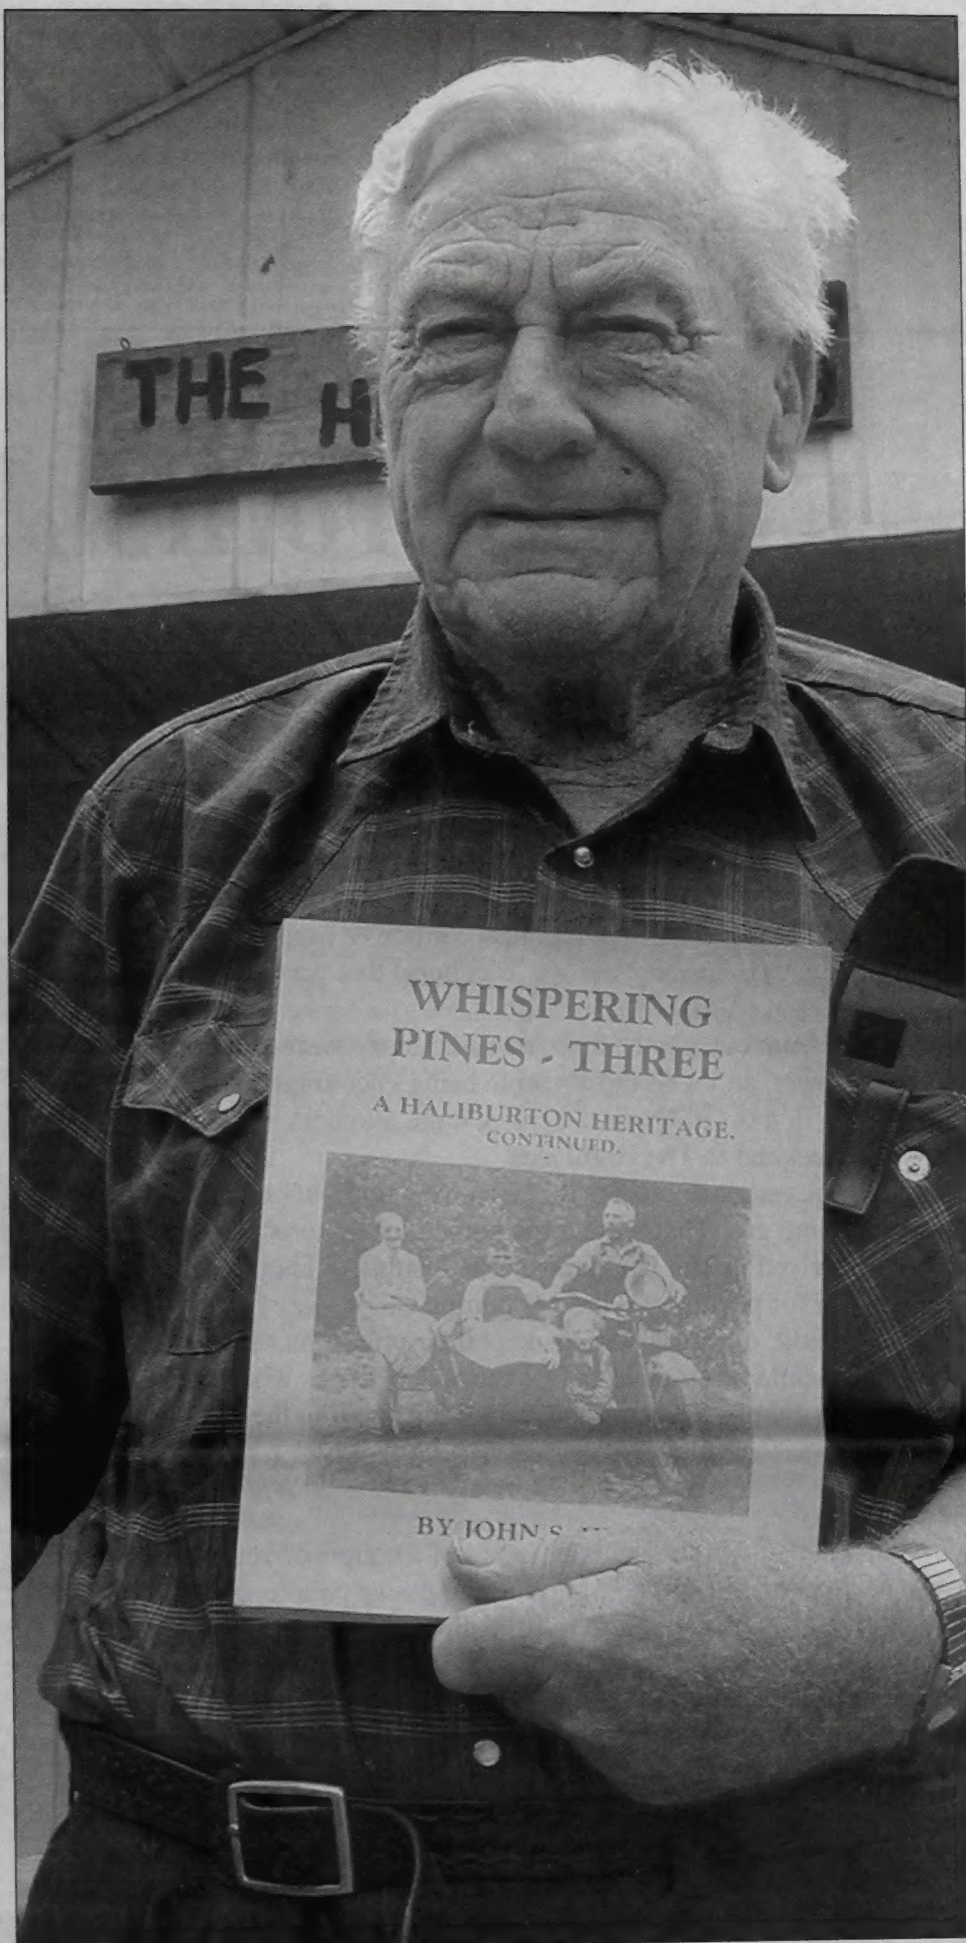

"Maybe I'll write another book," he says half-seriously.

You can purchase a copy of Whispering Pines - Three: A Haliburton Heritage Continued at John Hulbig's house on Old County Road 121 (ph: 286 1319), Lochlin general store (ph: 286 6130) or at the Minden Museum (ph: 286 3154).

Empty profits

It's times of crisis when we learn whom we can count on for support and kindness. Human nature, at least for some, dictates that we do what we can to assist with whatever we have available to make the situation as comfortable as possible for everyone concerned.

We also learn whom we should avoid in times of need. We refer to those who take advantage of the situation for their own profit.

During the massive power outage which hit most of eastern, central and southern Ontario, along with the north-eastern part of the United States, we were among the few areas that retained our power supply. We're not sure how that happened, exactly, but we're grateful that we were exempted from the crisis.

As people from outside the area learned that we were still connected to a supply of power, and with most people being encouraged not to report for work Friday in most of Ontario's cities, large numbers of people decided to spend the weekend in The Highlands.

Since the gas stations outside this area were without power, they were unable to pump gas. That left a large number of motorists looking for fuel once they arrived in The Highlands. The result was lengthy lineups as people jockeyed for positions at the gas pumps.

To their credit, most gas stations kept their prices the same, knowing that their tanks would be emptied before the tanker trucks would be able to replenish the supply. They did the right thing, serving the throngs of waiting customers on a first come, first served basis. From what we've heard, the motorists remained calmer than may have been expected in the sweltering heat.

On the other side of the coin, we heard of a couple of suppliers of fuel who saw the situation as an opportunity to gouge people who had little or no opportunity to go elsewhere to fill their tanks. A gas gauge hovering over the empty mark and no guarantee that the next fuel stop would have any fuel left is incentive enough to grit your teeth and pay an asking price far in excess of the normal rate.

What kind of light does this shed on The Highlands? Are those coming here for the first time going to go home with a good impression of us?

Making a killing on a few hundred litres of fuel might have seemed like the thing to do at the time, but it might just come back to haunt those who decided to profit from the situation. Even worse, we may all have been alienated by the actions of a few.

Those travellers who were taken advantage of are unlikely to ever stop at the same place again and they will surely advise anyone who will listen to avoid those fuel providers.

We can only hope the local population will also remember those who put profits first. It's unlikely that they will go unnoticed. Word around the coffee shops, restaurants, in grocery store lineups and on worksites almost guarantee they will be identified.

"Did you hear that so-and-so jacked his gas price up to..."

The law of supply and demand certainly applies under normal circumstances, but it should be tied to a sense of compassion and morality. This is a situation where a sense of community should prevail over the urge to maximize profits.

We believe the locals will remember such motives and do business in the future with suppliers who demonstrate a sense of community.

Airport response 'disappointing'

To the Editor:

Re: Tempers soar as Maple Lake fights airport expansion, Minden Times, 11 August, 2003

Thank you for your coverage of the Annual General Meeting of the Maple Beech Lake Property Owners Association (MBLPOA). As chair of that meeting and president of the MBLPOA, I would like to offer our perspective and set the record straight on a few points.

I was disappointed by Reeve Eleanor Harrison's criticism of our association and her rather drawn out personal attack on me, which to some extent set the tone of the meeting. Perhaps it was an attempt to deflect attention from the real issue that we were there to discuss, namely expansion of the Stanhope Airport. Fortunately, the tactic didn't work. But unfortunately, the association members got precious few credible answers to their valid questions (again). Rather, we were asked to have faith in our council. Many are finding that harder and harder to do.

The MBLPOA was criticized for the "way we operate." Interesting. We researched the airport expansion issue, talked to our members and found out their views, formulated a position based on the views of the majority of members and stated that position publicly (at our 2002 general meeting, which the reeve attended). We are carrying that position forward and we have a new mandate from our members to do so. I call this democracy in action and responsible representation.

It was stated that the MBLPOA is a small association and, by implication, insignificant in the township. Attendance at our "little" general meeting was about half the attendance at the township-sponsored Airport Open House in 2001. Not too bad for a little association run by volunteers on a shoestring budget.

Dark Times

I'D LIKE TO WRITE ABOUT the recent blackout, but from what I've heard in media reports, I believe that we were the only home on the eastern seaboard that remained unaffected.

That's right, while everyone else was having fun groping about in the dark, being stuck in crowded elevators or caught halfway through removing their beard with their Braun shaver, my family and I were turning on lights at will, watching television and opening and closing the fridge door just to determine if the bulb stayed on. It was decadent.

For a brief day or two, the entire staff of Hydro One was watching our meter. Our old farmhouse was the most technologically advanced nerve centre from here to Boston. We had computer, satellite dish, CD player, blow dryers, toasters, coffee makers, electric toothbrush and more. We even had nuclear capability if you don't discount our microwave.

But did we use this for selfish gain? Did we seize the opportunity for a lightning quick grasp at world domination? Certainly not, my plans only encompassed from here to the US border.

Look, I'm not a greedy guy, but you've got to admit that the thought would tempt anybody. I mean, with electricity and all those technological capabilities that were operative here on the hill, all I needed was an extra long extension cord and whole cities would have toppled at my feet.

Entire police forces would have joined my side, if only for assurance of the coffee and donuts. The youth of this province would have rallied behind us for promises of more television and perhaps some X-box time.

Women would have fallen in line just to get away from one more barbecued hot dog offered by a charcoal-crazed husband. High-rise dwellers would have allied with us for air-conditioning. Men would have rallied around the cause for ice-cold beer. Together, we would have been unstoppable.

I wouldn't have asked for much, just their sworn allegiance and a humble coronation.

Admittedly, this new world order might have come crashing down the minute the lights came back on. That's why I would have had the statues erected quickly. Nothing cements a dynasty like statues. I would have had them up so fast that the pigeons would have had to lead them.

Understand that they would have been nothing too fancy, just me standing there chiseled heroically in marble, twelve feet high, with noble brow furrowed and looking benevolent as I reached for a light switch or TV remote - the central symbols on my coat-of-arms. At the base of the statue, they might have been inscribed with the words: "Emperor Steve, a beacon of light to the darkened eastern seaboard" or

It's all the rage

I HAVE A DEAD MOUSE nailed to my office wall. I killed it personally - with my bare hands.

Don't call the SPCA - this is not the four-legged, furry, cheese-lusting kind of mouse. My wall trophy is plastic. It's the gizmo that you palpate to move around the little arrow on your computer monitor.

I've never been abidingly fond of my computer, but one day, when it did something profoundly annoying, I was, as they say, somewhat overcome with emotion. I felt an intense desire to wrench the device from my desk and pitch it overhand through the window, but that would have been expensive. It would also have let the flies in. That's when my eye fell upon my wee mouse, quivering on its mouse pad. I balled my right fist and brought it down like the hammer of Thor.

Set me back $19.95, but my, it felt grand.

I'm not the first person to go postal over a computer. As a matter of fact, a recent study revealed that 50 per cent of web surfers lose their tempers at least once a week.

It's not just computers of course - we're living in the Age of Rage.

Testosterone-heavy drivers who used to glare at each other and perhaps tap their horn once or twice now exchange obscene gestures, foam at the mouth and cut each other off. Road Rage.

And of course, there's Air Rage. A British banker by the name of Finneran flipped out on a flight from Buenos Aires to New York last year, assaulting three flight attendants and defecating on a food trolley.

A simple 'I'm not hungry' would have been sufficient, sir.

But when I heard about the assault on the woman dressed as an Italian sausage, I knew that Rage Rage was getting out of hand. Happened during a baseball game in Milwaukee last month. A woman dressed as an Italian sausage, accompanied by a colleague wearing a hot dog costume (I am not making this up) was running around the bases between innings as part of a fast food ad campaign. One of the ball players teasingly tapped the Italian sausage impersonator with his bat, the sausage lost its balance and knocked over the human hot dog and hey, presto! - an incident. The ball player was (I'm not making this up either) led off the diamond in handcuffs by gun-toting cops. An advertising executive speaking for the jostled meat puppets (perhaps overreacting ever so slightly) intoned "This is one of the most outrageous things I've ever seen inside a ballpark or outside a ballpark. It sickened me to see it."

Yeah. Mascot Rage. Life doesn't get any uglier than that.

Or maybe it does. Come with me now to a quiet, leafy cul de sac in the city of Lincoln, England. You see that yellow line of police tape encircling that modest cottage?

Murder investigation. The cottage owner got shot to death last week. By his next-door neighbour.

Because his hedge was too high.

That's right - Hedge Rage - and it's not the first fatal case. Last May, a 74-year-old homeowner in Louth, Lincolnshire died of a heart attack following a fistfight with his neighbour over a hedge dispute.

I should point out that we're not talking little Mulberry bushes here.

The hedges that are causing all the trouble are Leyland cypresses - monster trees that shoot up like bamboo on "Here stands proof that strange things happen in strange times." In any case, they would have been too adorable to topple, even long after the blackout ended.

As benevolent leaders go, I would have been right up there with Willy Wonka.

We would have shared the night-light. There would have been no reason for anyone in my kingdom to stub a toe in the night. My loyal subjects, you included, would have learned to love and honour me. I would have demanded few sacrifices and many might even suggest that my wave was "way cooler" than the Queen's.

But, alas, it wasn't to be. Just as I was collecting extension cords and making more coffee, the electricity returned. My visions of empire were dashed as half-bearded men finished what they started, people in elevators breathed easier, and jokers with bad timing licked electrical receptacles.

The dream is over. They say that power corrupts. Maybe, but not in this case.

Short story winner delighted with her week-long prize

To The Editor:

Thank you to the Agnes Jamieson Gallery and Curator Laurie Carmount for making it possible for this Grandma to go back to school.

I entered their first Short Story Writing Contest in May. To my surprise, I won the contest. The award was a one-week Creative Writing Course donated by the Haliburton School of the Arts. (The course is worth $215.)

Our excellent instructor was Jane Bow from Peterborough. Jane was educated in Spain, England and Canada. Her novel, Dead and Living, has been selected for a Carleton University course, and her first two plays have been produced, published and studied in Canada and India. She has also published short stories, non-fiction essays and articles, and a history of Peterborough.

There were 16 students in our class.

Two of us were from this area, the others travelled from Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa and Marathon in Northern Ontario. Sharing writing experiences was a wonderful opportunity for me. My goal is to write animal stories for my grandchildren. The stories are quite unusual and true. In this course I learned to feel more comfortable using dialogue and to create tension in the story to make the reader want to know about the outcome. I can still hear Jane saying, "Get to know your characters". Thank you Jane for your five-day impact on my life.

For all the would be writers out there, you must enter next year's Short Story Writing Contest! If it can happen to me, it can happen to you. Good Luck!

Democracy goes two ways

I was criticized by the reeve for blindsiding her. I have no idea what this is about. At our June meeting, I told the reeve that I had sent an e-mail to MPP Chris Hodgson and was planning to follow that with a detailed letter explaining our concerns about airport expansion. I told the reeve that I wanted to let her know about this in advance because I did not want her to think I was blindsiding her. Perhaps that's where she got the idea.

By the way, I did not "cut off" the reeve as reported. Rather, at about the 20-minute mark of her speech, I politely asked her to please cut short her remarks. We had previously agreed to 5 or 10 minutes, time was running short, and I wanted the members to have as much time as possible for questions and comments. I gave the reeve the opportunity for the last word at the end of the session but she declined.

A comment quoted in the article was that we'd be better off at the table than "fighting against the inevitable." What exactly would we do at the table? The reeve told us in no uncertain terms at our June executive meeting that council would not budge from its pro-expansion position. Negotiation was not an option presented to us.

I sincerely hope that from this point forward, the debate will remain focused on the issues. That is what the MBLPOA will be doing. It is far too important an issue to do otherwise.

PUT MOSQUITOES OUT OF TOUCH

Help protect yourself from West Nile virus, a virus spread by infected birds to mosquitoes.

Reduce your chance of being bitten by a mosquito by:

- wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors
- spraying clothing with repellents containing DEET to ward off mosquitoes that may bite through thin clothing
- applying repellent sparingly to exposed skin and re-applying as directed on the label
- making sure all windows and doors in your home have screens that are in good condition

MOSQUITOES BREED IN STANDING WATER.

You can help reduce the mosquito breeding areas around your home by:

- draining water regularly from rain barrels, flower pots, window boxes, planters and swimming pool covers
- making sure your eavestroughs drain properly
- changing the water in bird baths at least once a week
- turning over wheelbarrows, canoes and plastic wading pools to drain standing water

For more information on West Nile virus, and protection from mosquito bites, call your local health unit toll-free at 1-866-888-HKPR.

Maple Lake directors resign

To the Editor:

Re: Airport expansion plans. I would like to reply to Mike and Kim Scerri's letter (of Aug. 11).

First of all, I am a permanent resident on Maple Lake. I am also on the Waste Management Committee for Algonquin Highlands and I was on the Board of Directors of the Maple and Beech Lake Property Owners' Association. (I resigned my position at the end of the meeting on Aug. 9.) I am in favour of the airport expansion.

In their letter the Scerri's stated that they speak for "at least 90% of the property owners who do not use or support the airport expansion." Well, excuse me, but if any, they are only speaking for the 90 or so paid up members (not the 600 property owners) and even then, then not all of the members are opposed to the airport expansion.

I do not recall a vote or motion being put to the floor giving anyone the right to be the voice of the people. Of the 90% of the people the Scerri's supposedly represented, only about 10% expressed their opinions.

It was stated that opinions expressed to Reeve Harrison and council fell on deaf ears.

On the other side of the coin, the remarks made by Harrison and council also fell on totally deaf ears. When the association's president, Ian Wall, threatened to cut off Harrison, I was the one who told him to let her continue. Reeve Harrison did just that, but a lot of people weren't listening. Some people's minds had been filled so full of negative propaganda (with the newsletter) and a lot of unsubstantiated statements, they wouldn't listen to any reasoning. When Brian Tink suggested that the people should work with council to find the best solution to the issue, he was greeted with a chorus of boos.

When the small business venture Heat Line was mentioned, it was also met with a chorus of boos. For the life of me, I don't understand the attitude or mentality. Heat Line is a model of industrial development. The building and premises are neat and tidy. It creates employment for about eight people. The business is totally environmentally friendly – absolutely no noise, pollution or waste and virtually everything is reused or recycled. So, why do some people respond negatively to Heat Line?

Could it be because a) the business is successful; or b) it is near the airport; or c) the owner happens to own an airplane; or d) all of the above?

On June 22, the executive and directors of the association met to formulate the annual meeting (for Aug. 9). The committee consists of six executive and nine directors. Only six members – committee plus Reeve Harrison – attended. According to the Constitution, Article VII/3.0, we had enough for a quorum to conduct business. Reeve Harrison gave us a very detailed and in-depth synopsis on the airport expansion issue. At least one person virtually didn't hear a word she said. After Harrison left the meeting, the committee continued to conduct business and we put the airport issue to a vote. The resulting vote was split 50/50 (three for and three against) the airport expansion.

This split vote meant that the president did not have authorization to proceed as he did, i.e. 1) write a scathing letter to MPP Chris Hodgson or 2) write the propaganda newsletter to the members of the association. If you analyze the two documents the reference "I" is used constantly (meaning his doings and views). Never is there a reference to "we" (the committee). The committee was not informed of the course of action that he took.

When I received a copy of the letters, I was shocked. I called the association president to express my concerns and, to put it mildly, we didn't mince words. Mr. Wall told me, and I quote: "It's a democratic process, if you don't agree with me and don't like it, you can resign." Needless to say, three of us did resign from the board of directors (at the Aug. 9 meeting).

They did fill the three positions with "anti" supporters. Now the total executive/directors are "anti." This is not what I would call "democracy." Some might call it tyranny or dictatorship.

Remember, there are three sides to every story – your side, my side and the truth.

Generators also make noise

To the Editor:

A few months ago people were complaining about excessive noise. Well I have an issue with this new noise by-law not actually being followed through with when needed. Like when the sidewalks roll up at 6 p.m. the only noise I can hear at Parkside Street is a generator all the way over at the end of Main Street. That is, as far as I am concerned excessive noise because it can be heard until 1 or 2 a.m.

I've gone to someone's cottage a few times over the last month. We have either been inside or in the hot tub outside and have been quiet. The people across the river from this cottage have phoned the OPP quite a few times about noise and the OPP have come to the cottage and have told us that they wouldn't have known that there were people there if it wasn't for vehicles in the driveway.

I think it's time for the OPP to step up and actually go to the people who are causing excessive noise with generators and leave the people who are not making noise alone.

New municipal office a waste of taxpayers' money

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on the proposed municipal office.

A lot of people, myself included, think this is a lot of money to spend and the location would not be as convenient as it is now.

We have a good system now. If they have money available, there are a lot of places for it to go, including fixing roads and upgrading the present municipal building.

The reeve estimated $600,000 to $800,000 (and I am wondering if this is to build the parking lot?).

I am furious to think that our elected representatives have very little regard for the taxpayers.

Readers deserve better than Beyond 35's humour

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to several Beyond 35 columns written by Steve Galea.

I am very disappointed that the Times has lowered itself to the level of the content of these articles.

Steve is a gifted writer, as evidenced by his article on time spent with his son in

I feel very sad that Mr. Galea would lower his journalistic standards to write such poor material.

He can do better and we, your readers, deserve better.

Councillor against clean and clear case

To the Editor:

Your front page article in The Times about the fuss over Clarence McInerney's old pick-up points out why I and two other council members twice voted against our "Clean and Clear" by-law. It finally passed by one vote.

It's a sad situation when one neighbour can force the township to prosecute over an old truck, practically out of sight, kept in memory of the greatest character who ever graced our part of the country.

If a so-called "artist" welds a bunch of metal junk together, gives the result an esoteric title and a price of a few thousand dollars, this is fine. My beloved "stuff" has to be taken to the dump.

Country Journal, a delightful little U.S. magazine, says you can tell how long a person has lived in the country by the amount of "stuff" accumulated on that property. We are not allowed this foible in Minden Hills.

Whatever the result of the case against Clarence's truck, it will be a costly way to prove the validity of our by-law.

Singing summer

Children at St. Paul's Church, Minden, enjoy a sing-along during the "miracles of Christ" Vacation Bible School. Each morning between 15 and 22 kids – a mix of locals and cottagers – took part in Bible studies, games, crafts and music. The program was sponsored by the Anglican Parish of Minden-Kinmount, with St. John's Church in Irondale hosting the bible school the previous week.

Two cottage owners convicted for filling shorelands

Two men who were fined for doing illegal shoreline work on their cottage properties have been ordered to repair the damage.

Michael Murphy, of Niagara Falls, pleaded guilty in court to filling shorelands without a permit and has been fined $1,000. He was also ordered to remove the fill material. Court was told that Murphy had illegally deposited 40 truck loads of fill along the shore of Wren Lake, north of Minden.

Gary Land, of Uxbridge, pleaded guilty to filling shorelands without a permit and has been fined $1,000. He too received a court order to rehabilitate his shoreline. Court was told Land had constructed a rock retaining wall 22 metres in length in front of his cottage on Little Kennisis Lake, north of Haliburton.

Work permits were not issued in either case, as required by the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Cottage owners are reminded to obtain a work permit for any work below the high water line of water bodies. Penalties for doing illegal shoreline work can include fines of up to $10,000 and individuals can be required to rehabilitate the affected sites at their expense.

Justice of the Peace D. Jackson heard the cases in the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden on August 7, 2003.

If you have information about natural resource violations, please contact your local Ministry of Natural Resources office or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477).

TSW reservoir lakes at 76 per cent capacity

As of August 12, storage on the Haliburton lakes continued to decline, beginning the week at 79.0% and ending at about 76.4%. Storage is still about 6% higher than the August 12th normal of 70.1%. If more rain is experienced, the flow of the Gull River will be increased to insure that the level of these lakes continue to decline at the normal rate.

The recent precipitation resulted in continued high flows on the Otonabee River, now running at about 45 cubic meters per second (m3/s). This flow is higher than the long-term average of 32.8 m3/s in August. Storage on the Kawarthas, again, experienced an increase and is now about 6% greater than normal. The dry weather that is forecast should soon reduce this.

Sidewalks full of savings

The 13th Minden's Annual Summer Sidewalk Sale had fewer people than in other years. Store owners believe the scorching heat and the need for gasoline were reasons. There were 12 participating stores along the Main St. and along Hwy. 35. Some of the items on sale were seasonal products such as summer clothing, furniture and other assorted knick-knacks. Above, young woman look through the summer clothing rack in front of V&S Stedmans store. At left a family searches through some of the goods sold at Pharmasave Minden Drugstore.

*Camp BUCKO
kids enjoy an evening at the fair, and receive a $10,000 cheque*

Seventy-plus Camp BUCKO kids converged on the Minden Fairgrounds Thursday evening for an advance preview of the rides of the 2003 Haliburton County Fair. The Minden Fire Department made arrangements to have the young campers bused from the Kinark Outdoor Centre as a special treat.

The fire department, Haliburton Highlands OPP and members of the county's Emergency Medical Services, were part of a fund-raising campaign that saw several firefighters, police officers and ambulance personnel lose their hair. They took pledges and had their heads shaved at a special ceremony on Canada Day. The campaign raised $10,000 for the cause.

Camp BUCKO is a week-long camping experience for young burn victims aged seven to 17. The Kinark Outdoor Centre was chosen as the venue for the youngsters this year and it is likely to be Camp BUCKO's home base for future camping experiences.

Two buses pulled into the fairgrounds just before 7 p.m. Thursday and it was obvious there would be no holding the eager youngsters from the rides long enough for a group photo. Members of the fire department were able to gather them after about 40 minutes for a group photo and the presentation of the $10,000 cheque.

At right, A young girl, with her friends, plays to the camera after watching her friend miss out on winning at the "quarter toss" game.

Bacteria levels make Rotary beach unsafe for swimmers

Unfortunately, just as the hot weather of summer returns, the popular Rotary beaches in Minden have been posted as being unsafe for swimming because of high bacterial levels in the water.

The east river beach and the south river beach are both posted; however, all other beaches in the Highlands remain open.

Kushog Lake hosts holiday weekend picnic

Swimmers in the 'tubes of war' race touch the finish line at the edge of St. Nora Lake dock, while others look on, during the Kushog Lake Property Owners Association picnic at the Lesley M. Frost Centre on August 2. The weekend picnic, for cottagers with waterfront properties on Kushog Lake, took part in fun water races such as this, which involved two-person teams with one sitting in the tube and the other pushing from behind. The picnic also had sack races and three-legged races on land, and a decorative boat display.

Solutions in the works to improve Norland's water supply

As one of the city of Kawartha Lakes Council's water supply priorities, staff members are currently looking at a number of possible solutions for improving the quality of the water tap supply in Norland and a report will be forwarded to council this month by Kevin Williams, Director of Community Services.

The community tap at the Norland Recreation Centre has been shut off due to revised Ministry of the Environment (MOE) water quality standards.

The MOE established new regulations for water supply in June of 2003 and the water from the community tap does not meet those standards. The City is now looking at ways to comply with MOE regulations to bring the water supply up to acceptable standards. "I hope to make this a top priority for us," says Ward 2 Councillor Andy Luff.

The City of Kawartha Lakes is also continuing to work on correcting the existing water quality problems in the Norland Water System. The municipal water supply system was under a "boil water" order from the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit when it was assumed by the City, under an Ministry of the Environment (MOE) directive, in March 2002.

The City immediately engaged an engineering firm to review the system and recommend the necessary improvements so that Norland residents can be supplied with drinking water which meets MOE standards. "Council's decision to apply uniform water rates across the City assures Norland residents of water at a reasonable cost," said Mayor Art Truax. He added, "subject to MOE approval, the water system improvements/upgrades should start in the fall of 2003 and will take about 12 months to complete." The schedule for the project is locked into MOE scheduling and is not within the City's control.

An application has been made through the Provincial OSTAR program to pay for a substantial portion of the estimated $850,000 to $950,000 required to upgrade the Norland system. The rest of the costs will be covered by City-wide user fees and possibly Federal funds.

Norland residents continue to pay water rates based on the rate existing prior to the City assuming the system. When the new system is in place, Norland municipal water consumers will pay the same rate for water use as any other consumers of municipal water in the City of Kawartha Lakes.

It is the City's objective to provide Norland residents with a water supply which meets Provincial standards. The City is obliged to ensure that any water it supplies to Norland residents meets the new high standards of the Province, and all efforts will be made to achieve a safe water supply for Norland residents as soon as possible.

With no haggling, there's more time to consider other things. Like whether you want the security of a fixed rate that stays the same or the flexibility of a variable rate guaranteed under TD prime² for the full term. Either way, it's comfort you'll enjoy.

At TD Canada Trust, we can answer all your questions and help you find a mortgage which best fits your needs. Just visit your local branch or call now to book an in-home appointment with a Mobile Mortgage Specialist.

And if you're purchasing a home, ask about our Home Buyer Incentive of up to $750^{3A}. It's that little bit extra when you need it the most. Now, if only moving were this easy.

Life jacket saves teen

A life jacket is credited with saving the life of a young teenaged girl who was with a group at the Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre Friday.

Witnesses say she gulped some water when the canoe she was in overturned. She seemed to be having trouble breathing, but soon recovered from the ordeal.

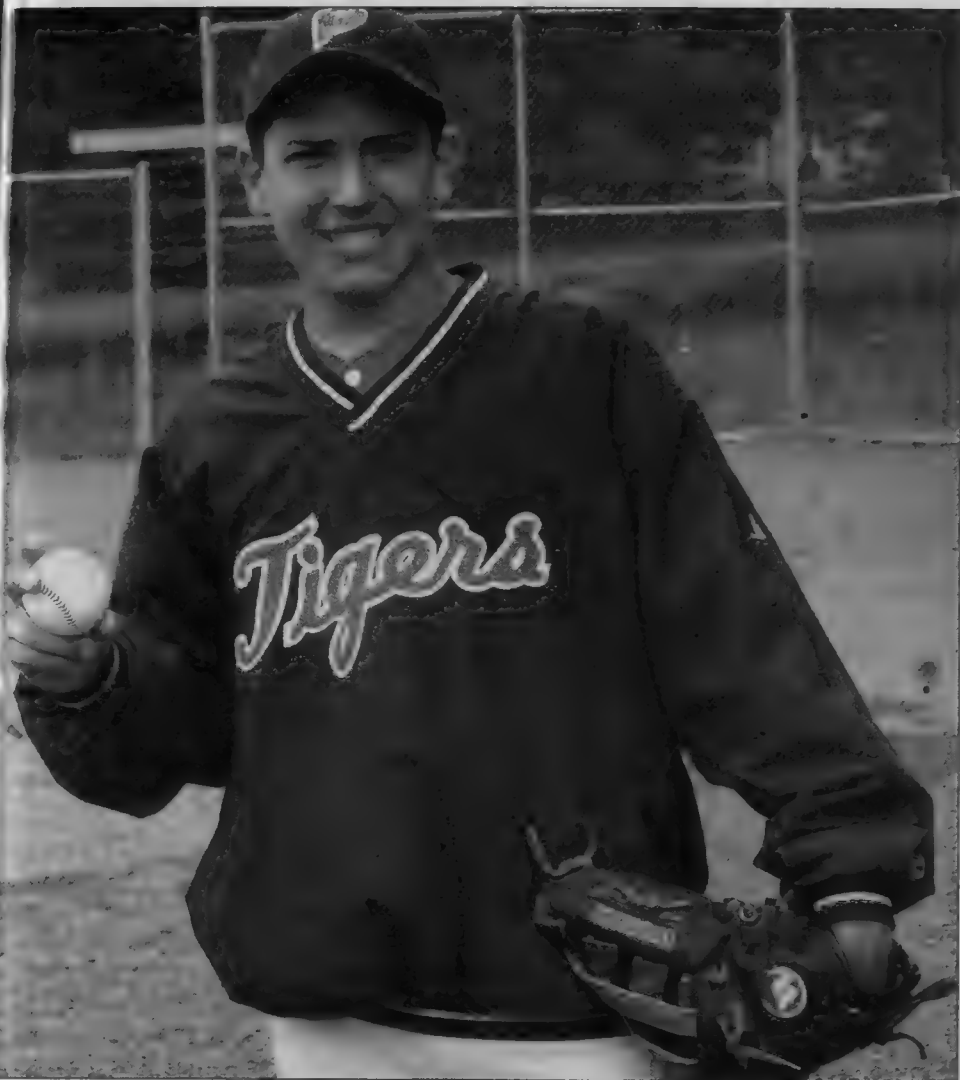

About 45 minutes later, the unidentified girl appeared to suffer an attack and was transported to the Huntsville hospital. She was treated and released.

A co-ordinator of the group who accompanied the girl to the hospital reported back to the Frost Centre that the girl is fine.

A Frost Centre official, John Etches, said wearing of life jackets is mandatory for youngsters participating in activities at the Centre. "Everyone did everything right," he said.

Jacob Lang has an outfielders spot with the Peterborough Tigers Minor Bantams

Kinmount teen a catch for Peterborough Tigers

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Trying out at three positions – third base, pitcher and outfielder – Kinmount's Jacob Lang impressed the coaches enough to earn a spot on the outfield of the Peterborough Tigers Minor Bantams of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association. Considering his relative lack of baseball experience, making the Tigers roster was quite an accomplishment for the 13 year-old from Kinmount.

The 2003 season was only Lang's second year of baseball, although he played softball in Kinmount since he was about eight years old.

The Tigers played in a six-team league, which includes Pickering, Ajax, Clarington, Whitby and Otonabee (Keene).

The Tigers hosted the EOBA playdowns on the August 8, 9 and 10 weekend, where they finished fourth overall. They will compete in the Ontario Baseball Association championship on the Labour Day weekend in London.

Jake is the son of Tom and Sue Lang. Tom has a nephew, Jeff Reeves, who earned a baseball scholarship to a U.S. university after playing for the Tigers. When he heard of the tryouts in Peterborough, Tom had the confidence in his son and was prepared to make the commitment to chauffeur him to and from the games and practices. So, they went to Peterborough and Jake got the nod.

"It was a tough group to crack," Tom said. "He was competing against products of the Peterborough Baseball Association. Jake is the first to graduate from our ball diamond here in Kinmount."

Tom said that by playing for the Peterborough team, he could hone his skills and work toward a scholarship. "There is more opportunity for education with a baseball scholarship, especially for Canadian players," Tom said. He cites his nephew, who went to the University of South Carolina on a full baseball scholarship. Now, Reese plays for the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball team.

Jake's ambition is to follow in his cousin's footsteps by earning a scholarship.

Jake's only baseball experience going into this season was last year, when he played for the Fenelon Falls Running Rebels.

At 5' 10" and 150 pounds, Jake isn't the biggest player on the team, but he impressed his coaches with his speed, agility and throwing arm, as well as his ability and willingness to learn.

Lang's coach Sean Plumpton said he is "very coachable." Plumpton said Lang listens and comprehends what his coaches tell him.

"He is an all-around contributor to the team. He has a lot of raw talent," Plumpton said. "He has a good arm, he's a good runner and he has a good glove. He's progressing really well."

The coach said Lang is well mannered, a gentleman and an all around nice kid.

Plumpton expects Lang to be out for the tryouts again next year.

With all the travelling – two games and practices every week – Plumpton gives credit to Jake's parents. "It's quite a commitment for Tom and Sue, with all the driving," he said.

Jake Lang is a year-round athlete. During the winter months he plays hockey with the Highland Storm.

Jake will celebrate his 14th birthday on September 5, during his first few days of Grade 9 at a new school – St. Thomas Aquinas in Lindsay.

highest number of dollars pledged. A very special welcome was extended to Dr. Paul Hwang. Dr. Hwang, a neurologist, and his family have purchased an area cottage and he is now providing valued consultation service at the Health Centre. Appreciation is extended to "Subway" [Minden, Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls] for providing 36 feet of party sandwich, Kawartha Dairy for the ice cream, and the many area merchants who kindly donated prizes for this event. See you all next year.

The Kinmount Railway Station Summer Art Show Series, presented and sponsored by the Kinmount Committee for Planning and Economic Development, will conclude this coming weekend. Ruth Orr will be the featured artist on Saturday, August 23 and Sunday, August 24 from 10 a.m.

until 4 p.m. each day. Ruth has been painting, primarily with watercolours, for over thirty years. Those who know Ruth's work will attest to the vibrant colours and true natural beauty. Hers is the large, detailed painting, depicting the wild flowers to be found along the Burnt River, at the entrance to the Austin Heritage Park. Do drop by. Ruth will be pleased to welcome you.

A Joint Service of Worship with Coboconk, Burnt River, Kinmount and Norland United Churches in Norland United Church will be held on Sunday, August 31 at 11 a.m. with lunch to follow.

At St. Luke's Anglican Church, Burnt River there will be an Open House with Ada Handley on Wednesday, August 20 from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. Everyone is most welcome.

notices

NOTICE RE 911

By means of this notice, the County of Haliburton is informing the citizens of the Township of Algonquin Highlands and the Municipality of Highlands East that the first round of 911 signage installation – street names and property addresses has been completed. First round installation is well underway in the Township of Minden Hills.

Signage installation is a work in progress. Portions of it will not be completed until Spring 2004. Thus, if your road does not now have new signage at all, or other properties on your road have it and you don't, please do not contact the Municipality, the County or the 911 Team at this time. Your patience is requested until we have completed our task.

You will be notified through the media when all signage has been installed in your Municipality or Township. If your street or your property are still without signs after receiving such notice, then make the 911 Project Team aware of your problem.

Rest assured that, until your sign is up, the emergency service agencies will continue to accept and respond to pre-911 street names and numbers or location descriptions.

Summer card games in full swing as players score big

Now for the Scoring News with the usual reminder to keep busy and well.

Thursday, August 7 euchre at the Minden Legion Branch 636: Lone hand honours went to Arla Pollard for the ladies and John Mallon for the gents. The evening's high scores for ladies/men were recorded by Verna McDonald and Iris Taylor, while Helen Skelding and Ed Hisson took the lows. Other prizes were won by Brenda De Guire, Verna McDonald, Ed Hisson, Margaret Fletcher and Carol Hill. Thanks to Elva Paisley for this report.

Friday, August 8 bid euchre at Club 35, Halls Lake: Moonshots landed on Marion Farr, Tom Orr, Vicki Campagnolo and Frank Awde along with Marge and Charlie Richardson. Blanche Anthony led the pinks with a strong 322, followed by Maxine Thomson 313 and Marge Richardson 268. Bev Swick took top spot for the white cards at 297, then Jack Cox 272 and Harold Smith 265. The hidden score holder was Alf Whyman.

Friday, August 8 duplicate bridge at Echo Hills, Haliburton: In north/south, Reet Murray and Bill Sandford were first at 61%, with Ron and Ken Sheppard second with 58%. Over in east/west, Mayme Douglas and Mike Collins took top spot at 61%, followed by Chris Ricketts and Nancy Kimoff 54%.

Saturday, August 9 bid euchre at Staunworth Terrace, Minden: Isobel Cherwenka had the highest score at 287, with Gala Stamp next at 276. Hidden score holders were Kay Naylor, Elli Langpohl and Elva Paisley. Single moonshots went to Pat Bailey and June Branning, with Isobel Cherwenka taking two. Thanks to Ruth Kellett for her update.

Monday, August 11 cribbage at the Minden Legion Branch 636: In first place was Frank Campagnolo, with Pat Scadden next in line. Gwen Cox took home the other prize and Joe Rivers found that seven was not really his lucky number for the evening.

Monday, August 11 euchre at the Friendship Club, St. Paul's Anglican Church, Minden: In the lone hands column it was Pearl Cowen for the ladies and Norm Lee for the gents. High scores for ladies/men went to Jeanne Keliele and Don Hicks with the afternoon's lows recorded by Laura Carnegie and Mabel Deacon. Pat Millard uncovered the hidden score, while Julie Keberer and Pearl Cowen were the special draw winners. Katie Parker reminds everyone that next week August birthdays will be celebrated, complete with a Laura Carnegie designer cake. Laura's thoughtfulness (and baking talent) is much appreciated by all at the Club.

Monday, August 11 euchre at Club 35, Halls Lake: Holding the most lone hand was Marion Farr, with Mary Schad high lady and Pearl Kernohan low. High man Garth Windsor and low man Tom Orr congratulated Mary Pearson on winning the baloney. Thanks to Jean Dutka for her update.

Monday, August 11 euchre at Staunworth Terrace, Minden: Pearl Cowen was the winner for most lone hands, with Georgina Deeks taking top spot for high hands and Beulah Hewitt for low hands. The special prize went to none other than our reporter Elaine Yeo.

Monday, August 11 Kinmount Seniors bid euchre at the Kinmount Legion Branch 441: Jim Corbett recorded the high score, with our reporter Mildred St. Thomas taking both second high honours and also a moonshot along with Barb Dunbar. The draw winners were Kit Schroter and Pat Roussel.

Tuesday, August 12 bid euchre at the Minden Legion Branch 636: Topping the charts was Gala Stamp, with Jean Scadden in second spot and Pearl Cowen third. Single moonshots went to Marcel and Pat Roussel, while Thelma Francis took two. Hidden scores were uncovered by Ida Young, Barb Dunbar and Elva Paisley. Marie Dennie reminds everyone that the upcoming "Big Bucks" event will be held on Sunday, September 14 and not September 7.

Tuesday, August 12 contract bridge at Stanhope: Muriel McIntosh reports three small slams, all involving Pearl Foster. Pearl's partners in this "hat trick" were Betty Dicker, Diane Spicer and Len McNeice. In recognition of her achievement Pearl was presented with the first "VCSD" Award, which loosely translates into the "Vince Carter Slam Dunk" Award. There was a tie for the highest score between Betty Roszell and Ross Fletcher at 6210, followed by Helen Cassidy 5720 and Joan Galley 5620. Robert Van der Meulen won the lucky draw, while Betty and Ross each took home a "Gemini" for their identical scores.

Wednesday, August 13 duplicate bridge at Parklane, Haliburton: North/south winners were Don Mills and Bill Sandford at 65%, then Ken and Ron Sheppard with 59%. For east/west, the leaders were Fran and Norm Smith 61%, followed by Fred and Ev Vanderland 56%.

Wednesday, August 13 bid euchre at Stanhope: That beautiful, bright moon in the Wednesday night sky sent down shots to Helen Windsor, Alf Helleman, Kevin Maloney, Dorothy Walters, David Lamb, Peter Farr, Sharon Evans and Marj and Dick Coffey. Leading the pinks was Gladys Mielon 264, then Marj Coffey 261 and Grace Smyth 260. For the white cards, it was Garth Windsor topping the charts at 321, followed by Dick Coffey 284 and Tom Pearson 272.

Wednesday, August 13 Kinmount Seniors euchre at the Kinmount Legion Branch 441: Mary Wilkins had the high score for the ladies and Marg Viney had the low. Top spot for the gents went to Roger Fournier, with Harold Harvie low man. There was a tie for most lone hands between Sally Taylor and Emily Harvie. Sally was also a draw winner along with Audrey Lapp.

450 IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON - For our loving Mother and Grandmother, Mickey Anderson, who passed away August 16, 2002. May the winds of love blow softly and whisper so you'll hear, How much we'll always love you and wish that you were here. We hold you close within our hearts, and there you shall remain. To watch over us throughout our lives, until we meet again. Sadly missed, but always remembered by Darian, Kelly, Kayla and Kendall. xxoo

THOMAS, MADELINE - In loving memory of a dear mother, Madeline, who passed away July 18, 1990. At times when the sun is setting And another day draws to a close, At times with a new day's dawning From a world of deep repose, At times when the blue skies darken And obscure the heavens above, At times when the storm is over And He envelopes us with His love, I remember. Sometimes in the breath of a fresh spring morn From the chill of winter, the earth reborn, Sometimes in the heat of a summer noon And the haunting glow of an Autumn moon, Sometimes when the breeze blows gently into my face And my mind drifts slowly to another place, Sometimes in the sparkle of fresh fallen snow With the deep belief that He will know, I remember. All times in the peace of a baby's sigh, And the lonely echo of a wild bird's cry, All times in the memories of a golden past And the hopes of a child that will always last, All times in the love that is held so dear, From the heart and the soul of one so near, All times when the mind may discourage me True faith that she abides with Thee, I remember. Love, Dwight, Robbie and a family of friends.

460 OBITUARIES

DAN SWINSON
